1. Short Overview of the Program

In May of 2015, the Henrico County Police Division, created the Henrico Police Faith Community Coalition. This partnership between Patrol Operations and Community Services was created to foster the relationship between our faith leaders, the community, and police. The mission of the Henrico Police Faith Community Coalition is to have open and honest dialogue with our faith-based communities regardless of worship affiliations. The Coalition enhances cooperation, trust, and transparency through our police and faith leaders in Henrico County. Our vision includes; engaging with our faith-based communities, sharing information, building lasting partnerships, and continuing to develop relationships with faith community leaders. After several learning sessions, the Henrico Police Faith Community Coalition has established itself as an information driven, networking opportunity for faith leaders and Division Members.

2. Problem/Challenge/Situation

The need for this program arose from a lack of coordinated efforts to work with our faith leaders. Although several of our Community and Patrol Officers had relationships with their faith community, we envisioned a unified county effort to seek input and support from all in the faith community. The creation of this Coalition has allowed us to reach a wide audience, where intelligence information, safety concerns, and fellowship are shared between Police Division members and our faith community.

3. How the Program Was Carried Out

In May of 2015, Major Clarence Hunter and Captain Linda Toney, of the Henrico County Police Division, created the Henrico Police Faith Community Coalition. Hunter and Toney recognized the need to coordinate efforts so as relationships are in place before crimes occur at or near a faith-based property, as well as the need to educate faith leaders on how to keep their congregations, staff members, and property safe. They met with Patrol and Community Officers to identify other specific needs of these faith community leaders, which led to them developing the mission and goals for the Faith Community Coalition.

The mission of the Henrico Police Faith Community Coalition is to have open and honest dialogue with our faith-based communities regardless of worship affiliations. The partnership between Patrol Operations and Community Services was created to foster the relationship between our faith leaders, the community, and police. We wanted to enhance cooperation, trust, and transparency through our police and faith leaders within Henrico County. Our vision includes; engaging with our faith-based communities, sharing information, building lasting partnerships, and continuing to develop relationships with faith community leaders.

The next challenge in developing the program was to contact every leader in Henrico County's faith community to invite them to join the Faith Community Coalition. The Division's Public Information Office marketed the program to all in the faith community by developing a flyer for the initial meetings and sending out news releases about the newly formed coalition. They also used social media such as Facebook and Twitter as well as the Division's webpage to raise awareness of the newly formed coalition and its upcoming meetings. Hunter and Toney also developed a contact/ mailing list of all houses of worship within Henrico County and sent the meeting flyer to every faith community leader on the list.

They carefully chose venues in three areas of the County (one at each of the Division's three police stations) so that it would be convenient for faith community leaders from throughout the county to attend one of the meetings, which all offered the same program. In addition, the initial meetings were scheduled in the evening, although one was scheduled in the afternoon to make it possible for more leaders to attend.

The topic of the first meeting series (three) was about the Faith Community Coalition itself and presented other pertinent information about the Division to facilitate a lasting relationship between police and faith community leaders. These meetings also provided an opportunity for leaders to meet with, talk to and to become acquainted with their Community Officers and Patrol Station Captains. Through conversations with the leaders, and throughout the meeting, officers gathered information about topics of interest and importance for future meetings.

4. Financing and Staffing

The only cost associated with the coalition has been time that Division members have spent on duty to prepare for and attend the learning sessions as well as the printing of flyers and supporting documentation that was provided through funds in our general budget.

5. Program Results

A series of three initial meetings were held in July of 2015 to discuss the coalition's vision and mission, to introduce Community Officers and Patrol Station Captains to our faith leaders, and to discuss future learning sessions. Approximately 90 people attended the first three meetings with an average of 30 at each meeting. After the first series of meetings, faith community leaders were excited about the coalition and spread the word to colleagues. As a result, subsequent meeting series have been equally and sometimes exceedingly well attended.

We, also, held two learning sessions in October of 2015, which featured the topic of church safety and security. We discussed having a safety plan, forming a security team, and reacting to an active shooter. Approximately 90 citizens attended these sessions, with an average of 48 at each session. In 2016, we've held two additional learning sessions. The January session presentation and discussion was led by our Crisis Intervention Team. Dialogue included mental health issues and services provided through crisis intervention. Approximately 80 people attended these sessions, 40 at each session. We have found that our Faith Community Coalition members are a mix of reverends, pastors, and other faith community leaders as well as congregation members, and interested citizens.

Two learning sessions are planned for April: Plan and a Prayer and Assisting Faith-Based Community Members Build Resilient Plans. These sessions will include emergency preparedness planning and provide an opportunity for members to meet the new Human Resources Advocate for the Aging. Members will also get updates on Henrico County's April NASCAR races as they will affect traffic near the houses of worship in that area. Two more learning sessions are planned for July which will present the Division's policies and procedures entitled, Fair and Impartial Policing and Body Worn Cameras.

Through these sessions and meetings, we've created an ever-growing contact list where hundreds of citizens and faith leaders can be contacted via Email and/or postal mail. The correspondence with members of the Faith Community Coalition has included crime prevention information and suggestion requests for future programs.

Plans to grow the program include personal visits to faith community leaders and door-to-door canvassing of houses of worship that have not attended any of our meetings during which we will introduce and invite them to join the Faith Community Coalitions. Community Officers and Station Captains are already conducting follow up visits to coalition members who have requested security surveys, CPTED (Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design) property surveys, and/or safety and security presentations.

6. Brief Summary

The creation of the Henrico Police Faith Community Coalition is worthy of the 2016 Virginia Association of Counties (VACO) Achievement Awards program because it is an innovative program that increased services to county residents and enhanced the safety of those in our faith community through free learning sessions offered at quarterly meetings. Each quarterly learning session will offer at least two separate times and venues to accommodate those with difficult schedules and various locations.

The Faith Community Coalition also enhances the Division's image within the County and allows the Police Division to network and build lasting relationships with leaders and citizens within our faith community. It expands Henrico County's dedication to transparency by offering these citizens another opportunity to learn, ask questions, and seek information directly from police officers, staff members, and County officials. This program will continue to grow and expand its reach into the faith community. The Faith Community Coalition will benefit the County, Police Division, and those in the faith community by providing opportunities for members of all different faiths to meet, learn, and grow, and to promote understanding, cooperation, and collaboration thus making Henrico County a safer place to live, work, play, and worship.
